The ronance and advosture of the formative years of Canada are visibly portrayed in the above painting, "Hudow's Bay Post, Sault Sa. Marie", by J. S. Italian, A.K.C.A., O.S.A., dier a text by W. m. Armstrong, C.E., of Teorots, and some in the John Ran Robertson collection, Toronto Public Libraries.

• Romance and Adventure are not dead. They were living and breathing in the days when Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario was a meeting-place of the Indian tribes. They called the place Pawiting, meaning "Turbulent Waters". Étienne Brulé visited the spot in 1622, and Jean Nicolet in 1634.

A mission was established in 1669 and a fort in 1751.

Through the occupancy of the British in 1762, the coming of the fur-trading North West Company in 1783, the post's destruction in the war of 1812, and its taking over by the Hudson's Bay Company in 1821, Romance and Adventure went hand-in-hand with Sault Ste. Marie.

There was Romance and Adventure too in Sault Ste. Marie's growth, in its in-corporation as a busy city in 1912, and in the building of its great canal, and in the founding of its metal industries.

Romance and Adventure will live again in the hearts of the men who turn from War to Peace. They will find both in the almost-virgin Algoma District, to which Sault Ste. Marie is gateway.

There will be Romance and Adventure for us all in the vast peacetime expansion of CANADA UNLIMITED which will be made possible by your purchase of Victory Bonds.
